Product Liability

Flaherty Sensabaugh & Bonasso represents many national and multi-national manufacturers in defense of product liability litigation in federal and state trial and appellate courts - whether personal injury, business loss or breach of warranty claims. FSB not only engages in product litigation throughout West Virginia; it also provides counsel and representation to clients on regional and national bases. Our product litigation group handles comprehensive complex litigation, and is experienced in the coordination of nationwide matters to ensure that each client's interests are accurately and consistently presented in each case.

FSB believes that the careful selection of an experienced team for each case and a results-oriented relationship with the client delivers the best results. Further, we are able to provide quality services at costs that are highly competitive to firms in most other areas of the United States. As every client has its own expectations of counsel, FSB lawyers and staff place a high priority on meeting each client's particular needs and expectations.

We also recognize the importance of the early investigation and development of claims and cases, and believe early case investigation and discovery provide the best opportunity for accurate case evaluation and, when necessary, for thorough development of cases for trial. As a result, our firm enjoys an excellent record of getting results for its clients - both in jury trials and in pretrial dismissals.

As a West Virginia law firm, FSB is well-versed in handling cases in a jurisdiction that some might perceive as a "difficult" jurisdiction, and our lawyers are well-positioned to provide high quality representation - often in high-stakes litigation. We have assembled an experienced and diverse group of product litigation lawyers with the depth and dedication required to obtain consistent and favorable results. FSB appreciates innovation and enjoys the opportunity to present fresh solutions to new and old problems alike.
